ORDER GRANTING
DEFENDANT
SCOTTSDALE'S
MOTION FOR JUDGMENT ON THE PLEADINGS

(Docket Nos. 16 & 16-1)

9 _____/

10
11
12 Defendant Scottsdale Insurance Co. files a motion under Rule 13 12(c) which provides for a motion for judgment on the pleadings, 14 although Scottsdale titled it a motion to dismiss Plaintiff
15 HotChalk Inc.'s complaint. Docket No. 16. HotChalk has filed a 16 response, and Scottsdale has filed a reply. Also before the Court 17 is Scottsdale's request for judicial notice. Docket No. 16-1.
18 Having considered oral argument on the motions and the papers
19 submitted by the parties, the Court GRANTS Scottsdale's motions.
20 The Court grants HotChalk leave to file an amended complaint 21 within seven days, if it can properly do so.

22 BACKGROUND

23 This case arises out of an insurance coverage dispute between 24 HotChalk and Scottsdale. HotChalk alleges Scottsdale sold it a 25 business and management indemnity policy, EKS3115498, providing 26 directors and officers coverage for the period November 13, 2013 27 to November 13, 2014. HotChalk alleges Scottsdale violated the 28

1 policy when it refused to defend and indemnify HotChalk in a
2 lawsuit alleging violations of the False Claims Act.

3 HotChalk helps universities create or expand their online 4 degree programs. HotChalk's services broadly include promoting 5 and administering those programs, including recruiting students.

6 On April 10, 2014, former employees of HotChalk filed a qui 7 tam complaint against the company and its university clients, 8 alleging violations of the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729, 9 which prohibits knowingly submitting false claims to the 10 government for payment or approval. The False Claims Act allows 11 private citizens to sue on behalf of the United States. 31
12 U.S.C. § 3729(b). The qui tam plaintiffs alleged HotChalk falsely 13 certified to the United States Department of Education that it 14 complied with Title IV of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The 15 Higher Education Act prohibits any institution that participates 16 in the grant and loan programs authorized under the Act from 17 paying employees charged with admissions or financial aid "any 18 commission, bonus, or other incentive payment based directly or 19 indirectly on success in securing enrollments or financial aid." 20 20 U.S.C. § 1094(a)(20); see also 34 C.F.R. § 668.14(b)(22). The 21 qui tam plaintiffs alleged HotChalk provided numerous forms of 22 incentive payments to employees charged with recruiting students, 23 and committed other violations. HotChalk is a for-profit 24 corporation, but the qui tam plaintiffs alleged that it was 25 required to comply with the incentive compensation ban, as were 26 the co-defendant universities. See 20 U.S.C. § 1094(c)
27 (compliance and audits of third-party servicers); 34 C.F.R.
28

1 § 668.25 (contracts between institution and third-party
2 servicers).

3 On May 14, 2014, HotChalk tendered the lawsuit to its 4 insurers including Scottsdale. On June 11, Scottsdale denied
5 coverage on the grounds that the claims against HotChalk arose out 6 of the company's professional services rendered to its customer 7 universities and were therefore excluded from coverage under the 8 policy.

9 Although the United States did not formally intervene in the 10 case, it convened settlement negotiations. On August 20, 2015, 11 HotChalk reached a settlement with the United States and the qui 12 tam plaintiffs under which it agreed to pay $500,000 to the United 13 States and $470,000 to the plaintiffs for their attorneys' fees.
14 HotChalk asserts it incurred $986,746 in attorneys' fees and costs 15 to defend itself in the qui tam litigation.

16 On June 10, 2016, HotChalk filed a complaint against 17 Scottsdale in San Francisco Superior Court for breach of contract 18 and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing.
19 On July 11, the case was removed. HotChalk demands compensatory 20 and consequential damages and its attorneys' fees.

21 LEGAL STANDARD

22 A motion for judgment on the pleadings, like a motion to 23 dismiss for failure to state a claim, addresses the sufficiency of 24 a pleading. The motions are "functionally identical" and the test 25 established in Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662 (2009), applies to 26 motions brought under either rule. Cafasso, U.S. ex rel. v. Gen.
27 Dynamics C4 Sys., Inc., 637 F.3d 1047, 1055 n.4 (9th Cir. 2011)
28

1 (quoting Dworkin v. Hustler Magazine Inc., 867 F.2d 1188, 1192
2 (9th Cir. 1989)).

3 As a result, "[d]ismissal under Rule 12(b)(6), and by analogy
4 under 12(c), is appropriate only where the complaint 'lacks a 5 cognizable legal theory or sufficient facts to support a 6 cognizable legal theory.'" Nazomi Commc'ns, Inc. v. Nokia Corp., 7 2011 WL 2837401, at *1 (N.D. Cal.) (citing Cafasso and quoting 8 Mendiondo v. Centinela Hosp. Med. Ctr., 521 F.3d 1097, 1104 (9th 9 Cir. 2008)); see Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 663 (citing Fed. R. Civ. P.
10 8(a)(2) and Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555-56 11 (2007)). In considering whether the complaint is sufficient to 12 state a claim, the court will take all material allegations as 13 true and construe them in the light most favorable to the 14 plaintiff. NL Indus., Inc. v. Kaplan, 792 F.2d 896, 898 (9th Cir.
15 1986). However, this principle is inapplicable to legal 16 conclusions; "threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of 17 action, supported by mere conclusory statements," are not taken as 18 true. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555).
19 The court may consider, in addition to the face of the pleadings, 20 exhibits attached to the pleadings, Durning v. First Boston Corp., 21 815 F.2d 1265, 1267 (9th Cir. 1987), and facts which may be 22 judicially noticed, Mullis v. United States Bankr. Court, 828 F.2d
23 1385, 1388 (9th Cir. 1987).

24 When granting a motion to dismiss, the court is generally 25 required to grant the plaintiff leave to amend, even if no request 26 to amend the pleading was made, unless amendment would be futile.
27 Cook, Perkiss & Liehe, Inc. v. N. Cal. Collection Serv. Inc., 911 28 F.2d 242, 246-47 (9th Cir. 1990); see Pac. W. Grp., Inc. v. Real

1 Time Sols., Inc., 321 F. App'x 566, 569 (9th Cir. 2008). In 2 determining whether amendment would be futile, the court examines 3 whether the complaint could be amended to cure the defect
4 requiring dismissal "without contradicting any of the allegations
5 of [the] original complaint." Reddy v. Litton Indus., Inc., 912
6 F.2d 291, 296 (9th Cir. 1990).

7 DISCUSSION

8 As a preliminary matter, Scottsdale has asked the Court to 9 take judicial notice of certain documents, and both parties cite 10 the documents throughout their papers. Scottsdale seeks judicial 11 notice of the complaint in the underlying False Claims Act
12 litigation, the complaint in the instant lawsuit, and attachments 13 to both complaints including the underlying insurance policy and a 14 service agreement between HotChalk and one of its customer 15 universities. HotChalk has not opposed. On a Rule 12(c) motion, 16 the Court may consider certain materials beyond the pleadings,
17 including exhibits to the non-moving party's pleading, Durning, 18 815 F.2d at 1267, and facts that can be judicially noticed, 19 Mullis, 828 F.2d at 1388. Documents in public court records may 20 be judicially noticed. Biagro W. Sales Inc. v. Helena Chem. Co., 21 160 F. Supp. 2d 1136, 1140 (E.D. Cal. 2001) ("matters of public 22 record may be considered, including pleadings, orders, and other 23 papers filed with the court or records of administrative bodies").
24 A court may also take judicial notice of documents that are 25 referenced in the complaint or central to the claims and 26 undisputedly authentic. EFK Investments, LLC v. Peerless Ins.
27 Co., 2014 WL 4802920, at *2 (N.D. Cal.) (taking judicial notice of 28 insurance policies outside the public record in dispute over

1 exclusion provision). Accordingly, Scottsdale's request for 2 judicial notice is GRANTED.

3 California substantive insurance law governs this diversity
4 case. See Encompass Ins. Co. v. Coast Nat'l Ins. Co., 764 F.3d 5 981, 984 (9th Cir. 2014). Under California law, interpretation of 6 an insurance policy and whether it provides coverage is a question
7 of law to be decided by the court. Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch., 8 Inc., 11 Cal. 4th 1, 18 (1995), as modified on denial of reh'g 9 (1995).

10 An insurance carrier "owes a broad duty to defend its insured 11 against claims that create a potential for indemnity." Horace 12 Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B., 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1081 (1993); see 13 also Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co., 65 Cal. 2d 263, 275 (1966) ("We 14 point out that the carrier must defend a suit which potentially 15 seeks damages within the coverage of the policy." (emphasis in 16 original)). "Implicit in this rule is the principle that the duty 17 to defend is broader than the duty to indemnify; an insurer may 18 owe a duty to defend its insured in an action in which no damages 19 ultimately are awarded." Horace Mann Ins., 4 Cal. 4th at 1081.
20 However, the duty to defend is not unlimited; it is measured by 21 the nature and kinds of risks covered by the policy. Waller, 11 22 Cal. 4th at 19. The duty to defend is a continuing one, arising 23 on tender of defense and lasting until the underlying lawsuit is 24 concluded. Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Super. Ct., 6 Cal. 4th 287, 25 295 (1993).

26 The burden is on the insured to establish the existence of a 27 potential for coverage. Montrose Chem., 6 Cal. 4th at 300. Any 28 doubt as to whether the facts establish the existence of the

1 defense duty must be resolved in the insured's favor. Id. at 299-
2 300. Once the insured meets its burden, the insurer must 3 establish the absence of any such potential coverage. Id. Thus, 4 "the insured need only show that the underlying claim may fall 5 within policy coverage; the insurer must prove that it cannot."
6 Id. (emphasis in original); see also MacKinnon v. Truck Ins.
7 Exch., 31 Cal. 4th 635, 648 (2003), as modified on denial of reh'g
8 (2003) ("The burden is on the insured to establish that the claim 9 is within the basic scope of coverage and on the insurer to 10 establish that the claim is specifically excluded.").

11 "The determination whether the insurer owes a duty to defend 12 usually is made in the first instance by comparing the allegations 13 of the complaint with the terms of the policy. Facts extrinsic to 14 the complaint also give rise to a duty to defend when they reveal 15 a possibility that the claim may be covered by the policy."
16 Horace Mann Ins., 4 Cal. 4th at 1081; see also MacKinnon, 31 Cal.
17 4th at 649 (finding "in order to ascertain the scope of an 18 exclusion, we must first consider the coverage language of the 19 policy").

20 The California Supreme Court has declared "the principles 21 that govern the construction of insurance policy language in this 22 state." MacKinnon, 31 Cal. 4th at 647. Under these principles, 23 courts "must give effect to the 'mutual intention' of the parties" 24 at the time the contract was formed. Id. "Such intent is to be 25 inferred, if possible, solely from the written provisions of the 26 contract." Id. "The 'clear and explicit' meaning of these 27 provisions, interpreted in their 'ordinary and popular sense,' 28 unless 'used by the parties in a technical sense or a special

1 meaning is given to them by usage' controls judicial 2 interpretation." Id. at 647-48 (citations omitted).

3 Under these principles, "exclusionary clauses are interpreted 4 narrowly against the insurer," which "cannot escape its basic duty 5 to insure by means of an exclusionary clause that is unclear."
6 Id. As a result, the "burden rests upon the insurer to phrase 7 exceptions and exclusions in clear and unmistakable language."
8 Therefore, "in order for an exclusionary clause to effectively 9 exclude coverage, it must be conspicuous, plain and clear." Id.
10 at 639 (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

11 However, even in the context of exclusionary provisions, 12 California courts have consistently given a broad 13 interpretation to the terms 'arising out of' or 'arising 14 from' in various kinds of insurance provisions. It is settled 15 that this language does not import any particular standard of 16 causation or theory of liability into an insurance policy.
Rather, it broadly links a factual situation with the event creating liability, and connotes only a minimal causal connection or incidental relationship.

17 Medill v. Westport Ins. Corp., 143 Cal. App. 4th 819, 830 (2006) 18 (citation omitted) (construing "arising out of" broadly and 19 finding no coverage as a result of exclusion in directors and 20 officers policy).

21 Scottsdale concedes that the coverage section of the policy 22 affords coverage for civil lawsuits and affords a duty to defend.
23 The instant motion to dismiss turns entirely on whether the 24 professional services exclusion in the policy that Scottsdale 25 issued to HotChalk applies to HotChalk's claim for coverage. The 26 undisputed language of the exclusion is as follows:

27 Insurer shall not be liable for Loss under this Coverage 28 Section on account of any Claim alleging, based upon, arising out of, attributable to, directly or indirectly arising from,

1 in consequence of, or in any way involving the rendering or 2 failing to render professional services, provided, however, 3 this exclusion shall not apply to any Claim(s) brought by any 4 securities holder of the Company in their capacity as such.

5 Docket No. 16-3, Complaint, Ex. A, insurance policy, endorsement
6 No. 20 (bold in original). Scottsdale argues the False Claims Act
7 lawsuit against HotChalk fell within this exclusion and it
8 therefore had no duty to defend or indemnify HotChalk. Scottsdale 9 further argues that the exclusion was consistent with the type of 10 insurance provided under the policy--directors and officers 11 insurance--and that coverage for professional services risks would 12 be provided by a professional errors and omissions policy.

13 The policy does not define "professional services;" however, 14 HotChalk asserts that it is in the "business of providing 15 technology and support services to universities looking to create 16 or expand online education programs" and concedes that "these 17 services" constitute professional services. Docket No. 22 at 7.
18 As a result, the instant motion turns on whether the False Claims 19 Act lawsuit arose out of these professional services.

20 The False Claims Act lawsuit against HotChalk arose out of 21 its alleged practice of compensating employees based on their 22 success in securing enrollments. HotChalk argues that the lawsuit 23 therefore related strictly to its employee compensation system, an 24 internal aspect of the way it ran its business, and accordingly 25 was unrelated to its professional services. That distinction is 26 unavailing.

27 HotChalk's allegedly incentive-based compensation scheme 28 could only have been improper because of the professional services that HotChalk provided. HotChalk is required to comply with the

1 incentive compensation ban in 20 U.S.C. § 1094(a)(20) in order to 2 be able lawfully to provide its professional services. Indeed, as 3 part of its service agreement with one of the universities, 4 HotChalk specifically agreed to comply with 20 U.S.C.
5 § 1094(a)(20). Docket No. 16-2, Ex. A, False Claims Act
6 complaint, Ex. A, services agreement with Centenary College
7 § 11.2. Unlike labor laws, the incentive compensation ban
8 regulates the specific professional activity in which HotChalk 9 engaged, and only applied to HotChalk's compensation of its 10 employees because it provided those professional services.

11 Congress instituted the incentive compensation ban in a 1992
12 amendment to the Higher Education Act, Higher Education Amendments 13 of 1992, Pub. L. No. 102-325, 106 Stat. 448 (1992), and the 14 legislative history behind the amendment shows that the incentive 15 compensation ban was intended to protect the government's 16 interests as a loan provider or guarantor, as well as the 17 interests of unwary potential loan recipients, by helping to 18 ensure that the students receiving loans are qualified and 19 unlikely to default. In a report entitled, Abuses in Federal 20 Student Aid Programs, the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs 21 found that from 1983 to 1989 annual student loan volume nearly 22 doubled while defaults increased more than threefold, increasing 23 the cost of defaults to the program from approximately ten percent 24 of program costs to thirty-six percent in that period and to more 25 than fifty percent by 1990. S. Rep. No. 102-58, at 1, 8 (1991).
26 The report also found that proprietary schools put business over 27 education by, among other things, holding contests "whereby sales 28 representatives earned incentive awards for enrolling the highest

1 number of student [sic] for a given period." Id. In a similar 2 report, the House Committee on Education and Labor found, in light
3 of doubling of student debt between 1980 and 1990, "Where past 4 history knew a class of indentured servants, today we are 5 producing a class of indentured students in bondage to their 6 educational debts." H.R. Rep. No. 102-447, at 9. The committee 7 found that the amendment "strengthen[ed] controls on schools and 8 colleges to end waste and abuse and to minimize loan defaults," 9 including by "prohibiting the use of commissioned sales persons 10 and recruiters." Id. at 10. The legislative history behind the 11 incentive compensation ban makes clear that it was intended to 12 regulate the manner in which schools and their third-party 13 servicers performed their services in order to protect the 14 government's own financial interests and its interest in 15 protecting student borrowers.

16 In Begun v. Scottsdale Ins. Co., Inc., 2013 WL 12077974 (N.D.
17 Cal.), aff'd sub nom. Begun v. Scottsdale Ins. Co., 613 F. App'x 18 643 (9th Cir. 2015), a court in this district interpreted 19 precisely the same exclusion provision in a Scottsdale business
20 and management indemnity insurance policy under California law.
21 In that case, a lawyer sued his payroll services company, 22 Clickbooks, and its directors for failing to deposit payroll tax 23 funds and instead absconding with the money. The directors
24 tendered the lawsuit to Scottsdale. Scottsdale refused coverage 25 on the basis that the lawsuit arose out of Clickbooks'
26 professional services. The underlying lawsuit went to trial 27 against the directors only, who did not themselves provide the 28 services that constituted Clickbooks' professional services. The 1 court found that the exclusion provision was unambiguous because 2 the term "'professional services' does not lack a generally 3 accepted meaning outside the context of the policy," and therefore 4 enforced it as written. Id. at *7. The court also found the 5 provision "very broad," id., and noted that it covers conduct 6 "directly or indirectly resulting from" and "in any way involved" 7 in rendering professional services, id. at *11 (emphasis in 8 original). Finally, the court found that the underlying lawsuit 9 against the directors arose out of the professional services 10 provided by Clickbooks. Id. at *8.

11 The causal link between the excluded activity and the actions
12 underlying the lawsuit is even tighter in this case than in Begun.
13 In Begun, the state court in the underlying case found that the 14 directors "did not provide any professional services at all," yet 15 the district court found that the lawsuit arose out of Clickbooks' 16 professional services because, "absent the professional services 17 that Clickbooks undisputedly performed, Plaintiffs would not have 18 made the business decision" that resulted in the lawsuit against 19 them. Begun, 2013 WL 12077974, at *11. Here, as discussed, 20 HotChalk undisputedly provided professional services, and absent 21 those professional services, HotChalk would not have been subject 22 to the law that it was alleged to have violated in the underlying 23 False Claims Act lawsuit.

24 At oral argument on October 25, HotChalk newly argued that a 25 professional services exclusion provision only excludes coverage 26 for lawsuits brought by the entity that commissioned the insured's 27 professional services, and therefore does not exclude coverage for 28 claims brought by third parties as was the case here. HotChalk

1 cited no law to support this proposed rule, and at least one
2 district court applying California law has found that a 3 professional services exclusion provision excluded coverage for a 4 lawsuit brought by a third party. Tagged, Inc. v. Scottsdale Ins.
5 Co., 2011 WL 2748682 (S.D.N.Y.).

6 Accordingly, the Court finds that the False Claims Act
7 lawsuit arose out of HotChalk's professional services and could 8 not potentially fall outside the professional services exclusion.
9 Because HotChalk's insurance claim was not potentially covered 10 under its policy with Scottsdale, its claim for breach of contract 11 must be dismissed.

12 In addition to its claim for breach of contract, HotChalk
13 also sued Scottsdale for breaching the implied covenant of good 14 faith and fair dealing. "[T]o establish an implied covenant 15 tortious breach, an insured must show first, that benefits were 16 due under the policy, and second, that the benefits were withheld 17 without proper cause. It follows an insured cannot maintain a 18 claim for tortious breach of the implied covenant of good faith 19 and fair dealing absent a covered loss." Benavides v. State Farm 20 Gen. Ins. Co., 136 Cal. App. 4th 1241, 1250 (2006) (citations 21 omitted). Because HotChalk's insurance claim was not covered, its 22 second claim also fails.

23 CONCLUSION

24 Accordingly, the Court grants Scottsdale's motion for 25 judgment on the pleadings and its request for judicial notice.
26 HotChalk may file an amended complaint within seven days, if it 27 can do so without rearguing positions that have been rejected in 28 this Order, or contradicting facts previously alleged. If after

1 the expiration of seven days HotChalk has not filed an amended 2 complaint, judgment shall be entered by the clerk of the court.
